THE TEST: The multiple-choice test may be given at a computer terminal or in paper and pencil format. You will be informed of the format on your Admission Notice. Your score on this test will be used to determine your place on an eligible list. You must achieve a score of at least 70% to pass the test.

The multiple-choice test is designed to assess the extent to which candidates have certain knowledge and abilities determined to be important to the performance of the tasks of a Computer Service Technician (CST). Task areas to be tested are as follows: responding to user issues, administrative duties, and related duties.

The test may include questions on computer hardware and how to repair, maintain, install, and troubleshoot various types of equipment; computer software and operating systems and how to install, maintain, and troubleshoot a wide range of applications, device drivers and software packages; and other related areas.

The test may also include questions requiring the use of any of the following abilities:

Written Expression - using English words or sentences in writing so that others will understand. Example: A CST completely and clearly documents the service repairs performed.

Problem Sensitivity - being able to tell when something is wrong or likely to go wrong. It includes being able to identify the whole problem, as well as elements of the problem. Example: A CST may hear an unfamiliar sound such as a whirring fan coming from the user's desktop and determine there is a problem with the machine.

Deductive Reasoning - applying general rules to specific problems to come up with logical answers. Example: A CST may, when assessing a specific problem with a computer, follow troubleshooting steps, which include if/then rules, in order to diagnose the issue.

Inductive Reasoning - combining separate pieces of information or specific answers to problems to form general rules or conclusions; thinking of possible reasons for why things go together. Example: If a CST sees only two options available for display resolution and would normally see multiple options on another computer, (s)he can determine the issue can be resolved by installing the device driver.

Information Ordering - following correctly a rule or set of rules or actions in a certain order. The rule or set of rules used must be given. The things or actions to be put in order can include numbers, letters, words, pictures, procedures, sentences and mathematical or logical operations. Example: A CST follows the installation instructions from start to finish in a specified order.

Certain questions may need to be answered on the basis of documents or other information supplied to the candidates on the date of the multiple-choice exam.
